

The Importance Of Conserving Wheat

Food Administrator Child sends the following to the Maui News with the request that it be published for the information of the people of this island:

"Our people must not lose sight of the fact that this war is as actual as it is awful. The fight would not be real if the fighters were not hurt. The people have wanted Food Administrators and Food Administrators but their chief interest seemed invariably to be in the questions of price. You cannot eat five dollar bills and this war cannot be won by money alone. It takes men and munitions and so far as the American people are concerned above everything else the demand for food. The people of the east were admonished repeatedly to conserve their sugar and they went on eating candy until suddenly a pound at a purchase was the limit. Only the heroic efforts of Mr. Hoover and his associates prevented the price from mounting to 25 cents and even 50 cents a pound in this country.

"The people of the east were admonished to conserve their coal. They were urged to unload their cars and to facilitate transportation and they went along gayly making money, standing up when the national anthem was played and talking about the bigness of America until finally for five days every fire in the factories was extinguished and for nine succeeding Mondays business was practically suspended. Fourteen working days out of the twenty-eight in February were lost to the world because people would not listen to insistent counsel.

"Now I want to talk to the people of Hawaii about wheat. I have told you more than once that instead of having 80,000,000 bushels to ship abroad from the 1917 harvest, we had only 35,000,000 bushels available as an exportable surplus, and that every bushel had been shipped about the first of December. If our Allies do not get wheat, and meat, they cannot fight and it is physically impossible to put our troops on the western front in France in time to do any good. We must fill the stomachs of the fighting men in Europe and we must sustain their families or our cause is lost.

"Now let me tell you something. In spite of all of the pleadings of Mr. Hoover up to the middle of January our consumption of wheat was almost normal. We had hung the little cards in our windows; we had knitted and talked about food conservation and then snaked white bread into our homes. The inevitable result will follow namely; America will be absolutely without wheat for three months before next year's harvest unless during the next six months we cut our consumption absolutely in two. In every community and in every state there are those to be found who eat with their fore feet in the trough. They are the profiteers on one hand and the hoarders on the other hand. No profiteer and hoarder in times like these is a patriot. It is the duty of every patriotic citizen in our country first of all to go immediately on the fifty-fifty rule, promulgated by our President thru Mr. Hoover, and every single day use some substitute for one-half of his normal wheat consumption.

"It is his second patriotic duty to see to it that his neighbor does his duty. It is not fair that you should eat a bread which you don't enjoy in order to serve your country, while someone across the street enjoys every indulgence.

"When the East consumed its coal it invited calamity and an embargo shut off business in the East for half of the month of February. I am neither a prophet or a bluffer but I want to say that no community will be permitted to imperil America's institutions by consuming more than its fair share of the wheat of this country. The fifty-fifty rule must be enforced. Consumers will have no quarrel with their grocers but should rather have a pride in those of them who perform their duties absolutely. I shall not hesitate, if necessity requires it, to cut off the entire flour supply of any grocer who fails to conform to this rule. On the other hand our office will make every effort within its power to help merchants find substitutes and to aid our allies in securing prompt shipments of corn and barley to grind for our people.

"In conclusion let me report, this war is as actual as it is awful, and the most that we can do will be as nothing compared with the least of the sacrifices which are to be found in very home in France. War is not a feather bed for anyone.

"J. F. CHILD,
U. S. Food Administrator
For Hawaii."

AT THE THEATERS

Wallace Reid in Stirring War Drama "The Hostage"

Wallace Reid, one of Paramount's cleverest screen actors, will be seen on the screen of the Walluku Orpheum theater in a late production entitled "The Hostage." This is a stirring war drama, Mr. Reid presenting the part of a young lieutenant. The story was written by Beulah Marie Dix who is responsible for many of Paramount's most successful screen dramas. As a lieutenant in the army of the Lowlanders, Mr. Reid is given as a hostage by his father to insure the good behavior of the army in its retreat from the territory of the Highlanders. In depicting the scenes of this trouble, the director has reproduced faithfully some of the most striking incidents of the war. Through it all runs a love story and the intense dramatic incidents in the war element of the story combined with the lighter vein of love and romance, gives to the screen a most interesting subject. The young lieutenant falls in love with a beautiful young girl who is the daughter of the chief of the Highlanders. But the way to the young girl's heart is not easy and before he wins her he meets with thrilling experiences because of his defiance of all known rules governing hostages of war and as a result he is sentenced to be shot. He is saved only by the declaration of peace between the two factions.

"The Hostage" is a story that will appeal to all classes and one that will be thoroughly enjoyed by each and everyone who sees it at the Walluku Orpheum theater on Saturday of this week.

Pauline Frederick in "The Hostage"

Pauline Frederick has achieved many notable triumphs in screen productions in which she has been seen here, but in few if any of her earlier pictures does she attain the height she reaches in the new Paramount production, "Double Crossed."

The narrative, which is a tale of modern domestic life with a criminal twist, has a real plot and is full of interest and swift action. The story was written by Hector Turnbull and arranged for the screen by Eve Unsell, who has been responsible for many of the most successful Paramount productions. To be shown at the Orpheum next Wednesday.

Brings Seena Owen "A Woman's Awakening"

"A Woman's Awakening," the Triangle Fine-Arts picture directed by Chester Withey and starring Seena Owen, which will be shown at the Walluku theater Friday of next week presents the problem of a young woman attempting to maintain her ideals and independence after marriage to a young rake, whose only aim is to dissipate her fortune.

The role is an admirable one for the return of Miss Owen to the screen after a retirement of several months. She is surrounded by a cast that includes Alma Rueben, heroine of "The Americano," A. D. Sears, Kate Bruce and Alberta Lee.

The story, which is the work of Frank E. Woods, concerns a young girl reared in the secluded manner of the old school so that she knows nothing of the worldly life. She marries a young society man, who promises to introduce her to the "real world" where men and women enjoy perfect equality. But he soon reveals that he married her only for her money. The girl's mother is an invalid, and the only friend to whom she may have recourse for advice is a lawyer and a former admirer of her. One night the husband is murdered just as he is preparing to leave the house with the balance of his wife's fortune. Both the wife and the lawyer are suspected of the crime. The spectators, as well as the characters of the play, are mystified until the big moment of revelation.

"The Broadway Sport"
Stuart Holmes appears in an entirely new sort of role in "The Broadway Sport," his next William Fox photoplay, which will be shown at the Walluku theater on Monday next.

Mr. Holmes plays the role of Hezekiah Dill, an awkward, bespectacled gawk, employed as a clerk in the flour mill of the local magnate. An old maid employed in the office loves him but he spurns her for a hopeless ambition to wed the boss's daughter, the village belle (Wanda Petto). While working late in the mill one night Dill catches two yeggs at work at the safe. The door is open and he tumbles them into the vault and locks the door. He then summons the boss and the police, after putting the money which the crooks had taken out of the safe into a vacuum cleaner. In his fancy Dill imagines himself in New York with the money, and never did anyone set the pace he pictures. The boss's arrival with the sheriff ends Dill's reverie. His daughter is with him. Dill takes the money out of the vacuum cleaner and hands it to his boss. The daughter embraces him and hails him as her hero. Dill smiles for the first time in his hounded life.

Kellermann Film Shows Acquatics
To Maui aquatics always serve to interest. Any amount of expert swimming is to be seen in the $1,000,000 film "A Daughter of the Gods" featuring Annette Kellermann. While Kellermann may not startle the world with speed records the little Australian appears to be more at home in the water than probably any maid who has ever sported at Waikiki.

To Maui-ites therefore, the burning of a sultan's city or the clash of thousands on the battlefield, as shown in "The Daughter of the Gods," is not nearly so fascinating as the water race staged between Miss Kellermann and a score of more Jamaicans from whom she is seeking to escape after a dive into the foaming sea from a dizzy height. The race could not have been better staged were it held right off the shores of Maui. It is a thriller, Kellermann swimming with long powerful strokes and the natives of Jamaica thrashing the water with their short, swift jabs. At one stage Miss Kellermann is about to be overtaken, but dives and doubles on her tracks thus throwing off her pursuers.

Another thrilling scene is Miss Kellermann's descent of a rocky, turbulent stream that empties into the sea, the while Miss Kellermann having her hands and feet bound tightly.

To be shown at Walluku Orpheum Tuesday 19th.—Adv.
